(d) To what extent did Reversal of Partition of Bengal in 1911 contributed towards the formation of Pakistan Movement between 1906-1919? Explain your answer. [10]

SOURCE A

We must say that today, behind the ranks of one of the finest armies in the world, there are millions of Indian people, ready to cooperate with the British government in defence of an Empire to which we are proud to belong. In the presence of a common enemy, be it Germany or anyone else, we set aside our differences. India has always been loyal. Our future development in terms of prosperity and the recognition of our rights as citizens depends on our loyalty now in Britain's hour of need.

Adapted from an editorial in the Calcutta Bengali newspaper commenting on India's entry into the First World War, 1914

SOURCE B

A vintage postcard celebrating the coronation of King George V and Queen Mary in Delhi, 1911

B) In the picture we can see lots of soldiers in royal attires with guns at a formal event. This showcases it was a proper, significant event or ceremony. We can also see the Indian people attending the ceremony happily. This shows the British's immense influence, respect and power it has gained in the Indian subcontinent. The massive Rows over show how powerful the british were and how wealthy they were to have such a prosperous event. This was at the Delhi Darbar in 1911 when King George the 5th's visit of India. ~~[illegible]~~

C) The muslims felt a need for their own political party for numerous reasons. Firstly, in 1867 the Hindus demanded ~~hindi~~ urdu to be replaced by hindi as the second official language of subcontinent. The Hindus did protests, riots, demonstrations etc, and were being supported by the Indian National Congress. However, the muslims tried to put forward their concerns and reservations to the british however they were unsuccessful because they had no political platform to carry their concerns. They were also not able to organize themselves for protests. As a result, the british accepted the hindus demands and the muslims felt a need for a political party for the first time. This was a major reason for its creation.

In 1885, a retired indian civil servant, sir allan octavian hume created indian national congress. Since the congress was for elite indians, it was mostly dominated by wealthy educated hindus meaning they would favour hindus in decisions. This could be seen during partition of Bengal and urdu-hindi controversy. The muslims realized they could not rely on congress for the protection of their rights and need create a political party to counter it and protect themselves. This was a significant reason as otherwise the muslims rights would be ignored.

During the partition of Bengal was done in favour of muslims. The hindus heavily opposed it by doing speeches, ~~demonstratio~~ demonstrations, protests, riots etc. They also did an assassination attempt on Lord minto, then viceroy and ~~started~~ started a socio-economic boycott known as Swadeshi movement. ~~As a result~~ The muslims could not carry their concerns or organize any protest because they lacked a political party. As a result it was reversed in 1911. The muslims realized they desperately needed a party and this was the most important reason as they were losing power.

d). The pakistan movement was formed due to Muslim hindu reasons. The Reversal of partition was one of them. The Reversal of partition was ~~to~~ done in favour of hindus and made muslims a minority again. The muslims were very angry at this. This was an important reason as they were now a minority again.

Furthermore in the morley minto Reforms. The ~~to~~ muslims gained separate electorates ~~at~~ but the congress opposed it and said it was against the principle of democracy and was dividing them on communal basis. The muslims realized that they were now identified as a separate nation and could not trust congress so they moved towards pakistan movement. This was a major reason. They also introduced property qualifications which meant only 1% of the population could vote. This was a significant reason.

In 1913 the Kanpur mosque was broken instead of a hindu temple to extend a road. This caused outrage amongst the muslims due to british favouritism and was a significant reason. in 1913 the balkan wars also occured between ottoman empire and balkan states. The british supported the balkans and the turks were being forced to fight with fellow muslims. This further deteriorated relations. This was a significant reason

The british also promised concessions after war. the montagu chelmsford Reforms 1919 system of diarchy was introduced however the muslims only got the insignificant departments such as public works, health education etc. And the provincial governor who was ~~elected~~ chosen by british had power over the elected provincial ~~gov~~ minister. As a result the indians were not given any real power hence this was a significant reason.

In 1919, the Rowlatt act was introduced in which person was arrested without warrant, ~~the~~ detention without bail, verdict without trial and the british could send citizens to live anywhere in the empire. The muslims were furious and tried to do a protest in Amritsar however the british imposed curfew. The indian national congress to defied curfew where 20,000 people including muslims gathered at Jallianwala bagh. The british officer in charge general Dyer ordered his soldiers to open fire at the unarmed crowd. As a result 400 people died and 1200 were injured. This was a huge Reason.
